The 3rd Annual Current Issues in Coronary and Structural Heart Disease: A Multidisciplinary Approach conference offers participants a unique opportunity to interact with experts as they debate the management of patients with coronary and structural heart disease. This active learning format features critical deliberation regarding patient cases, clinical findings, and management plan options. Participants examine cases from multiple perspectives and gain an in-depth understanding of patient care decisions supported by keynote lectures. This format will allow practitioners the opportunity to apply new information and evidence based guidelines into their practices.

Target Audience: Cardiologists, surgeons, primary care physicians, hospitalists, nurse practitioners, nurses, physician assistants, fellows, residents, and allied health professionals.
